The best bin worms are eisenia foetida - redworms or tigerworms and sometimes called red wigglers (tho all bait store red wigglers are not necessarily eisenia foetida). You can get some at Seeds of Change.

<http://www.seedsofchange.com/> - search for worms - the first choice - "Red Wiggler Worms" will be what you want to select. I called them to verify the species. Redworms multiply quickly, are classic compost worms and eat a bunch of compost. Do a search thru OHG's archives for redworm or eisenia foetida or wormbin and it'll pull up a few dialogues with lotsa useful info...

That's where I got some time back and they're still munching away quite happily in my 5-gallon bins here in my office...
